

Sir Shark and his Friends

Niko Ayala

There was shark swimming through the sea it was crystal clear.

As far as I can see.

Unfortunately, in some areas the sea is not as bright and blue as a sapphire diamond ring.

Our beautiful bright coral reef, sea turtles, whales, and other friends are being affected by plastic and garbage.

Because us humans need to learn the damage of the garbage and our lack of knowledge.

Over 5 trillion pieces of plastic are floating around in the oceans weighing over 250 tons.

And our friends are dying and bloating because this is floating.

When whales breach for air, plastic gets stuck in their blowhole.

And that is not fair.

Sharks and birds are known to be scavengers so it's common for them to accidentally eat plastic, boat screws, nets, and parts of planes...

Isn't that insane?

So, the point of my sea life poem is that sea life and the ocean is a beautiful blue planet and unfortunately there's still too much plastic and pollution. So there needs to be more solutions.

Which is to be much smarter about plastic and throw it into our bright blue recyclable bins and not into our Blue Planet. As well use recyclable bags so our poor turtles don't mistake them for tasty jellyfish. We need to work with each other and make our ocean a wonderful bright blue world!
