

Your Plastic

Lucy Jonson

When people think of beaches, there's shells, sand and sea
The beach is not harmful, not to you nor to me

Animals have been here since the Jurassic
But there's a new threat called Microplastic

"What is that?" you might ask
It's plastic that starts as everyday things like toys, tools, even a
Hydro Flask

But turns brittle and breaks apart
Scientists have tried to help, with tests or a fancy chart

But that's not what we need
We want you to buy less plastic, have less greed

It doesn't just hurt sea animals, though
It also hurts your fellow humans, you know

Did you know that many recycling companies dump their plastic in a third world country?
And that these people can't just run free?

Did you know that they don't have any other answer?
But to burn it in their homes, giving them Cancer?

And what is the cause of this?
